

Kimberly Leonard

What started out as a pretty standard finance and accounting career for The Kleos Group's founder Kimberly Leonard has turned into anything but run-of-the-mill. After getting her feet wet at corporations like Amdahl Technologies and Sun Microsystems, Kimberly founded her first business and began serving startups and non-profit organizations in Silicon Valley as she was raising her children. That was in the late 90s, and since then her business endeavors have grown and grown.

Over the last 20-plus years, Kimberly has served numerous small businesses and startups, from high-tech, SaaS, and manufacturing companies to biotech and medical device companies, as well as non-profit organizations, helping them to realize their potential. She is known for her creativity, analytical thinking, and big-picture results, as well as her accomplishments in navigating the unique challenges of startups.

Kimberly's distinguished career has spanned finance and accounting, human resources, operations, financial planning, and sales operations. With such diverse experience, she is well equipped to understand and handle the multitude of particular needs that startup and non-profit clients face.

In addition to serving organizations as a senior finance and accounting consultant, Kimberly is a respected community leader in both professional and volunteer organizations. She actively leverages her business and finance expertise to benefit organizations which do great work in their communities and this world.

It has been Kimberly's experience working with both boutique and mid-size accounting firms that has most shaped her business, values, and approach to working with small businesses today. Kimberly applies the knowledge, lessons, and skills she has learned throughout her career to provide innovative growth solutions, visionary support, and wickedly smart finance talent to each of her clients. To Kimberly, there is nothing more satisfying than serving The Kleos Group's clients with honor and integrity, a dedication to brilliance, and a deep caring.

Kimberly has lived in the heart of Silicon Valley, in Los Gatos, CA. A true Texan at heart, Kimberly grew up in the Dallas, TX area and relocated to Silicon Valley in 1998. She loves to spend time with her husband Mark and their two college kids, hiking at the coast and snowboarding in Lake Tahoe. She enjoys traveling for volunteer trips in exciting locales, where she combines her sense of adventure and love of nature with her desire to serve others.
